

Chapter three – John goes to school

Today is a special day, because school is starting again after the summer holidays. John likes to go to school. There he meets all his friends and the teachers are okay. His favourite subjects are History, Science and Geography. When he arrived at school all his friends were already there.

“Hi, John, how are you?”, they said.

“Fine, thank you.”, John answered.

“Did you see the game on Saturday?”

Yes, John had seen the game. Ipswich had won Liverpool with three goals against one. The Icelander in the Ipswich team, Hermann Hreiðarsson, had been the man of the match. He even scored one of the goals. After having talked to his friends about the game, the bell rang. It was time for the headmaster's speech. The headmaster's speech was always the same from year to year, but John didn't mind listening to it. When the headmaster had finished, they all went to their classrooms, and waited for their teacher, Miss Marple. But they were in for a surprise. Instead of Miss Marple, a man in a green sweater came into the room. He told them Miss Marple had just given birth to a baby girl, and this year he would be their main teacher. Even though John was sure he would miss Miss Marple, he was not too disappointed, because he liked the young man who said his name was Anthony Adams.

Til þess að læra tungumál er nauðsynlegt að læra hvað einstök orð þýða. Þess vegna er mikilvægt að skrifa þau niður og þýðinguna við. Það hjálpar ykkur líka að muna hvernig þau eru skrifuð.
